Amendments to a draft act

Amendments by Parliament set out in two columns

Deletions are indicated in bold italics in the left-hand column. Replacements are indicated in bold italics in both columns. New text is indicated in bold italics in the right-hand column.

The first and second lines of the header of each amendment identify the relevant part of the draft act under consideration. If an amendment pertains to an existing act that the draft act is seeking to amend, the amendment heading includes a third line identifying the existing act and a fourth line identifying the provision in that act that Parliament wishes to amend.

Amendments by Parliament in the form of a consolidated text

New text is highlighted in bold italics. Deletions are indicated using either the ▬ symbol or ~~strikeout~~. Replacements are indicated by highlighting the new text in bold italics and by deleting or striking out the text that has been replaced.

By way of exception, purely technical changes made by the drafting departments in preparing the final text are not highlighted.

DRAFT EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT LEGISLATIVE RESOLUTION

on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on work-life balance for parents and carers and repealing Council Directive 2010/18/EU (COM(2017)0253 – C8-0137/2017 – 2017/0085(COD))

(Ordinary legislative procedure: first reading)

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Commission proposal to Parliament and the Council (COM(2017)0253),
 - having regard to Article 294(2), and Article 153(1)(i) and (2)(b) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, pursuant to which the Commission submitted the proposal to Parliament (C8-0137/2017),
 - having regard to Article 294(3) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union,
 - having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee of 6 December 2017¹,
 - having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions of 30 November 2017²,
 - having regard to Rule 59 of its Rules of Procedure,
 - having regard to the report of the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs and the opinions of the Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality and the Committee on Legal Affairs (A8-0270/2018),
1. Adopts its position at first reading hereinafter set out;
 2. Calls on the Commission to refer the matter to Parliament again if it replaces, substantially amends or intends to substantially amend its proposal;
 3. Instructs its President to forward its position to the Council, the Commission and the national parliaments.

Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive

Recital 2

Text proposed by the Commission

(2) Equality between men and women is a fundamental principle of the Union. According to Article 3 of the Treaty on European Union the promotion of equality between women and men is one of the Union's aims. Similarly, Article 23 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union requires equality between women and men to be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

Amendment

(2) Gender equality is a fundamental principle of the Union. According to Article 3 of the Treaty on European Union, combatting social exclusion and discrimination, promoting social justice and protection, equality between women and men, solidarity between generations and protecting of the rights of the child are aims of the Union. Article 8 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union provides that the Union must aim to eliminate inequalities and to promote equality between men and women in all its activities. Moreover, Title III of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (the Charter) provides that everyone is equal before the law, that discrimination is prohibited and that equality between women and men is to be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay (Articles 20, 21 and 23 of the Charter).

Amendment 2

Proposal for a directive

Recital 3

Text proposed by the Commission

(3) Article 33 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union provides for the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, to reconcile family and professional life.

Amendment

(3) Article 33 of the Charter provides for legal, economic and social protection of the family, the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, to reconcile family and professional life.

Amendment 3

Proposal for a directive

Recital 4

Text proposed by the Commission

(4) The Union is party to the United Nations' Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities. The provisions of that Convention are thus, from the time of its entry into force, an integral part of the European Union legal order and Union legislation must as far as possible be interpreted in a manner that is consistent with the Convention. The Convention provides, among other things, in its Article 7 that Parties shall take all necessary measures to ensure the full enjoyment by children with disabilities of all human rights and fundamental freedoms on an equal basis with other children.

Amendment

(4) The Union and all Member States are party to the United Nations' Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities and more generally are to promote and protect the fundamental rights enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The provisions of that Convention are thus, from the time of its entry into force, an integral part of the European Union legal order and Union legislation must as far as possible be interpreted in a manner that is consistent with the Convention. The Convention provides, among other things, in point 24 of its Preamble and in Article 7 that Parties shall take all necessary measures to ensure the full and equal enjoyment by children with disabilities of all human rights and fundamental freedoms on an equal basis with other children. Moreover, the Convention, in its Article 23, provides that Parties are to take effective and appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities in all matters relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships on an equal basis with others.

Amendment 4

Proposal for a directive

Recital 4 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(4a) The Member States have signed and ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and are therefore legally bound to take all measures for the implementation of the rights concerned. The Convention provides, inter alia, in its Article 18 that parents or, as the case may be, legal guardians, have the primary responsibility for the upbringing and development of the child, and that the best interests of the child will be their basic concern. It also reminds States of their responsibility to take all appropriate measures to ensure that children of working parents have the right to benefit from child-care services and facilities for which they are eligible.

Amendment 5

Proposal for a directive

Recital 5

Text proposed by the Commission

(5) Work-life balance policies should contribute to the achievement of gender equality by promoting the participation of women in the labour market, making it easier for men to share caring responsibilities on an equal basis with women, and closing gender gaps in earnings and pay. Such policies should take into account demographic changes including the effects of an ageing population.

Amendment

(5) Work-life balance policies should contribute to the achievement of gender equality by promoting the participation of women in the labour market, encouraging and making it easier for men to share caring responsibilities on an equal basis with women, and closing gender gaps in earnings, pay and pension. Such policies should take into account reducing gender stereotypes, recognising and redistributing care responsibilities and developing and implementing quality standards for all types of care services and, further, acknowledging demographic changes including the effects of an ageing population and its impact on care responsibilities. Addressing the challenge presented by demographic change is vital to ensuring the preparedness of work-life balance policies for the future of work. Particular attention needs to be given to the labour market participation of vulnerable categories of women.

Amendment 6

Proposal for a directive Recital 5 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(5a) Policies addressing work-life balance in relation to informal carers – who currently provide, free of charge, 80 % of all care across the Union – are relevant to and commensurate with the challenges posed by demographic changes. Those policies are expected to contribute to mitigating the effects of an increasing care demand on the one hand, and the trend towards smaller and more geographically dispersed families as well as increasing number of women entering the labour market, decreasing the informal care potential, on the other. The prevalence of informal care in the Union, coupled with the pressure on public expenditure in some countries means that this form of support is expected to increase in significance. It is therefore clear that informal care needs to be supported and measures that enable carers to combine care with work are indispensable.

Amendment 7

Proposal for a directive Recital 6 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6a) The European Pillar of Social Rights, which was proclaimed by the Union institutions on 17 November 2017 aims to deliver new and more effective rights for citizens of the Union. The Pillar builds upon 20 key principles, including Principle 2 on Gender Equality, Principle 3 on Equal Opportunities, and Principle 9 on Work-life Balance. The latter states that “parents and people with caring responsibilities have the right to suitable leave, adaptable working arrangements and access to care services. Women and men shall have equal access to special leaves of absence in order to fulfil their caring responsibilities and be encouraged to use them in a balanced way”.

Amendment 8

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6b) Parents and other people with caring responsibilities should have the right to suitable leave, adaptable working arrangements and access to care services. Women and men should have equal access to special leave of absence in order to fulfil their caring responsibilities and should be encouraged to use them in a balanced way.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6c) The European Parliament’s report of 18 June 2013 on ‘Impact of the crisis on access to care for vulnerable groups’ specifically calls on the Commission to propose a directive on carers’ leave.

Amendment 10

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6 d (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6d) According to Commission (Eurostat) data for October 2017, the male employment rate in the Union was 71,9 %, compared to the female employment rate of 61,4 %, despite the fact that women have a higher level of education.

Amendment 11

Proposal for a directive Recital 7

Text proposed by the Commission

(7) Work-life balance remains however a considerable challenge for many parents and workers with caring responsibilities, with a negative impact on female employment. A major factor contributing to the underrepresentation of women in the labour market is the difficulty of balancing work and family obligations. When they have children, women tend to work less hours in paid employment and spend more time fulfilling unpaid care responsibilities. Having an ill or dependent relative has also been shown to have a negative impact on female employment, leading some women to drop out of the labour market entirely.

Amendment

(7) Work-life balance remains a considerable challenge for many parents and workers with caring responsibilities, with a negative impact on female employment. A determining factor contributing to the underrepresentation of women in the labour market, besides discrimination in access to work and in their employment status and payment and in the types of work open to them, is the difficulty of balancing work and family responsibilities. When they have children, women tend to work less hours in paid employment and spend more time fulfilling unpaid care tasks. Moreover, there is an increasing tendency to extend working hours until late in the evening and a prevalence in certain sectors of night work or work on public holidays and this makes it difficult for workers to reconcile work with their duties towards children and other relatives or persons from their immediate circle in need of care or support. Having a relative with care or support needs has also been shown to have a negative impact on female employment, leading a number of women to drop out of the labour market partly or entirely. This in turn has a negative impact on the social security and pension rights of those carers, in some cases leading to an increased risk of poverty and social exclusion, especially during old age. Research and practise demonstrate benefits to employers as a consequence of addressing the needs of working carers, leading to better outcomes, such as reduced absenteeism, a greater ability to attract staff and to retain and motivate staff.

Amendment 12

Proposal for a directive

Recital 7 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(7a) The availability of quality, accessible, and affordable infrastructure for the care of children and relatives with care or support needs has proven to be a crucial factor for work-life balance policies that facilitate the rapid return of mothers to, and an increasing participation of women on, the labour market. However, by 2018 the majority of the Member States still have not yet achieved the 2002 Barcelona objectives for childcare. The achievement of those objectives is crucial to allow women to fully participate in employment and prioritising the investment in community-based quality, accessible and affordable childcare in the Multiannual Financial Framework is pivotal to unlocking the situation. The establishment of leave for individual carers should therefore not serve as a substitute for professional, accessible, affordable and high-quality community-based care services.

Amendment 13

Proposal for a directive

Recital 8

Text proposed by the Commission

(8) The current Union legal framework provides limited incentives for men to assume an equal share of caring responsibilities. Lack of paid paternity and parental leave in many Member States contributes to the low take-up of such leave by fathers. The imbalance in the design of work-life balance policies between women and men reinforces gender differences between work and care. Conversely, use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, such as leave or flexible working arrangements, has been shown to have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment.

Amendment

(8) The current Union legal framework provides limited incentives for men to assume an equal share of caring responsibilities. Lack of paid paternity and parental leave as well as transferability of parental leave in many Member States contributes to the low take-up of such leave by fathers. The imbalance in the design of work-life balance policies between women and men reinforces gender stereotypes and differences between work and care. Conversely, use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, such as leave or adaptable working arrangements, has been shown to have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment. Furthermore, Eurofound research shows that take-up rates among parents depend on many interlinked factors. Of particularly great importance are high-quality, accessible and affordable facilities for childcare, care for elderly people and for people with disabilities; information about the leave available; leave compensation and pay disparities; prevailing family organisation models; and the extent to which workers fear isolation from the labour market when taking leave. Young people is the group that is clearly among the most vulnerable to all those factors.

Amendment 14

Proposal for a directive
Recital 8 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8a) In order to improve work-life balance, discriminatory practices such as the persistent gender pay gap should be tackled as to eventually ensure greater equity in the labour market. Member States together with the social partners and relevant stakeholders should include gender equality education in their curricula in compulsory and pre-school education and to continue with public authorities' efforts to provide information and raise awareness. Policies on equal treatment should aim to address the issue of stereotypes in both male and female occupations and roles and the social partners should act upon their key role in informing both workers and employers and in raising their awareness about tackling discrimination.

Amendment 15

Proposal for a directive Recital 8 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8b) To better assess the impact of the underlying and other related legislation, relevant data such as the number of working hours, pay, position, including a breakdown by gender and age should be collected and published at local, regional and national level in order to document intersectional discrimination and shape policies in a targeted and resource-efficient way. The European Institute for Gender Equality (EIGE), the European Foundation for the Improvement of Living and Working Conditions (EUROFOUND) and the European Centre for the Development of Vocational Training (Cedefop), together with national and regional equality bodies, should continuously update work-life balance indicators to ensure data is relevant and timely.

Recital 8 c (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8c) Investing in community-based public services for people with disabilities or age-related support needs is key to ensuring that women are not forced out of the labour market or unable to remain or re-enter paid employment, in line with the Council Conclusions of 7 December 2017 on Enhancing Community-Based Support and Care for Independent Living.

Amendment 17

Proposal for a directive Recital 8 d (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8d) In order to build a socially and economically sustainable society, the responsibility for a suitable work-life balance should be shared among workers, families, the social partners, local and regional authorities and all public and private employers and service providers.

Amendment 18

Proposal for a directive Recital 9 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(9a) The social partners should be encouraged by Member States to continue their active work with regard to facilitating the reconciliation of work, private and family life and improving gender equality and equal treatment in the labour market through education, adult learning, raising awareness and information campaigns.

Amendment 19

Proposal for a directive Recital 9 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(9b) The social partners should be consulted about the design and implementation of economic, employment and social policies according to national practices. They should be encouraged to negotiate and conclude collective agreements in matters relevant to them, while respecting their autonomy and their right to collective action.

Amendment 20

Proposal for a directive Recital 10

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(10) It is appropriate to repeal and replace Directive 2010/18/EU which currently regulates parental leave by putting into effect a framework agreement concluded between the social partners. This Directive builds, in particular, upon the rules laid down in Directive 2010/18/EU and complements them by strengthening existing rights and by introducing new rights.

(10) It is appropriate to repeal and replace Directive 2010/18/EU which currently regulates parental leave by putting into effect a framework agreement concluded between the social partners. This Directive builds, in particular, upon the rules laid down in Directive 2010/18/EU and complements them by strengthening existing rights and by introducing new rights. Nothing in this Directive should be interpreted as diminishing previously existing rights pursuant to that Directive.

Amendment 21

Proposal for a directive Recital 11

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(11) This Directive lays down minimum

(11) This Directive lays down minimum requirements related to paternity, parental and carers' leave and to flexible working arrangements for parents and workers with caring responsibilities. By facilitating the reconciliation of work and family life for parents and carers, this Directive should contribute to the Treaty-based goals of equality between men and women with regard to labour market opportunities, equal treatment at work and the promotion of a high level of employment in the Union.

requirements related to paternity, parental and carers' leave and to adaptable working arrangements for parents and workers with caring responsibilities. By facilitating the reconciliation of work and family life for parents and carers, this Directive should contribute to the Treaty-based goals of equality between men and women with regard to labour market opportunities, equal treatment at work and the promotion of a high level of employment in the Union. Moreover, this Directive recalls current demographic developments that lead to increasing care needs due to the ageing of society and, consequently, the need to invest and develop accessible, affordable and high-quality care facilities for child and elderly persons that allow carers to maintain an active professional life.

Amendment 22

Proposal for a directive Recital 12

Text proposed by the Commission

(12) This Directive should apply to all workers who have employment contracts or other employment relationships. As is currently the case under Clause 2(3) of the Annex to Directive 2010/18/EU, this should include contracts relating to employment or employment relationships of part-time workers, fixed-term contract workers or persons with a contract of employment or employment relationship with a temporary agency.

Amendment

(12) This Directive should apply to all workers who have employment contracts or other employment relationships. As is currently the case under Clause 2(3) of the Annex to Directive 2010/18/EU, this should include contracts relating to employment or employment relationships of part-time workers, fixed-term contract workers or persons with a contract of employment or employment relationship with a temporary agency. The Commission should assess the possibility of extending the enjoyment of the rights provided for in this Directive to self-employed persons. The Commission should if appropriate, submit a legislative proposal on that basis.

Amendment 23

Proposal for a directive Recital 12 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(12a) Union law ensures the principle of equal treatment between various types of employment relationships, prohibits any direct or indirect discrimination based on sex in matters of employment, occupation, social protection and access to goods and services, ensures portability and preservation of rights in the case of mobility between Member States and guarantees minimum requirements for the acquisition and preservation of supplementary pension rights across borders, as well as minimum requirements of transparency with regard to occupational schemes.

Amendment 24

Proposal for a directive Recital 13

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(13) In order to encourage a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paternity leave for fathers to be taken on the occasion of the birth of a child should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in national law.

(13) In order to strengthen a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paid paternity leave for fathers or for equivalent second parents, as established in national law, which is to be taken around the time of the birth or adoption of a child, or of a stillbirth, should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in national law.

Amendment 25

Proposal for a directive

Recital 13 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(13a) Member States should take specific measures whereby all the benefits provided for in this Directive are applicable when parents have a lengthy stay abroad in order to complete an international adoption procedure.

Amendment 26

Proposal for a directive

Recital 14

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other.

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other. Ensuring that four months of parental leave is exclusively available to men and cannot be transferred to the other parent, prompts fathers to take it, thus promoting fatherhood. It also promotes and facilitates mothers' reintegration to work after maternity and parental leave. Creating conditions for a more balanced distribution of the responsibilities of care between both parents certainly contributes to an increase in the participation of men and women in employment.

Amendment 27

Proposal for a directive Recital 15

Text proposed by the Commission

(15) In order to provide greater possibility for parents to use parental leave as their children grow up, the right to parental leave should be granted until the child is at least twelve years old. Member States should be able to specify the period of notice to be given by the worker to the employer when applying for parental leave and to decide whether the right to parental leave may be subject to a certain period of service. In view of the growing diversity of contractual arrangements, the sum of successive fixed-term contracts with the same employer should be taken into account for the purpose of calculating the period of service. To balance the needs of workers with those of employers, Member States should also be able to decide whether they define if the employer may be allowed to postpone the granting of parental leave under certain circumstances. In such cases, the employer should provide justification for the postponement.

Given that flexibility makes it more likely that second parents, in particular fathers, will take up their entitlement to such leave, workers should be able to request to take parental leave on a full-time or part-time basis or in other flexible forms. It should be up to the employer whether or not to accept such a request for parental leave in other flexible forms than full-time.

Amendment

(15) In order to provide greater possibility for parents to use parental leave as their children grow up, the right to parental leave should be granted until the child is at least 10 years old. Member States should be able to specify taking into account in particular the constraints of micro, small and medium-sized enterprises, a reasonable period of notice to be given by the worker to the employer when applying for parental leave and to decide whether the right to parental leave may be subject to a certain period of service. Member States should be able to introduce a requirement for a minimum period of service, of no longer than six months, before the worker is entitled to benefit from that right. In view of the growing diversity of contractual arrangements, the sum of successive fixed-term contracts with the same employer should be taken into account for the purpose of calculating the period of service. To balance the needs of workers with those of employers, Member States should also determine whether they define if the employer may be allowed to postpone the granting of parental leave for a reasonable period of time under objective circumstances. In such cases, the employer should provide justification for the postponement in writing.

Given that flexibility makes it more likely that second parents, in particular fathers, will take up their entitlement to such leave, workers should be able to request to take parental leave on a full-time or part-time basis or in other flexible forms. It should be up to the employer whether or not to accept such a request for parental leave in other flexible forms than full-time.

Member States should also assess if the conditions and detailed arrangements of parental leave should be adapted to the specific needs of parents in particularly disadvantaged situations.

Member States should also assess if the conditions and detailed arrangements of parental leave should be adapted to the specific needs of parents in particularly disadvantaged situations, in particular with regard to children with a disability, a mental health problem, or a serious medical condition or illness, as well as with regard to single parents, who should have access to at least the same level of rights and protection ensured to parents under this Directive and may benefit from specific provisions in accordance with national law considering their specific situation.

Amendment 28

Proposal for a directive Recital 16

Text proposed by the Commission

(16) In order to facilitate the return to work following parental leave, workers and employers should be encouraged to maintain contact during the period of leave and may make arrangements for any appropriate reintegration measures, to be decided between the parties concerned, taking into account national law, collective agreements and practice

Amendment

(16) In order to facilitate the return to work following parental leave, workers and employers should be encouraged to maintain voluntary contact during the period of leave and may make arrangements for any appropriate reintegration measures, such as training or retraining, to be decided between the parties concerned, taking into account national law, collective agreements and practice. It should be made clear that workers who do not wish to maintain contact are not obliged to do so and are not to be discriminated against in any way. Furthermore, employers should inform workers during their period of leave or adaptable working arrangements about any training offered to the rest of the workers, promotion process and internal vacancies available, and those workers should retain their right to participate in them.

Amendment 29

Proposal for a directive Recital 17

Text proposed by the Commission

(17) In order to provide greater opportunities to remain in the work force for men and women carrying of elderly family member and/or other relatives in need of care, workers with a seriously ill or dependant relative should have the right to take time off from work in the form of carers' leave to take care of that relative. To prevent abuse of that right, proof of the serious illness or dependency may be required prior to granting of the leave.

Amendment

(17) In order to provide greater opportunities to remain in the work force for workers caring for elderly family member and/or other relatives in need of care, workers with a relative with care or support needs due to a serious medical reason or an age-related impairment should have the right to take time off from work in the form of carers' leave to take care of that relative. Medical proof of the serious medical reason for care or support needs should be required prior to granting of the leave, while at all times protecting the privacy and personal data of both the worker and the person in need of care, in accordance with national law.

Amendment 30

Proposal for a directive Recital 18

Text proposed by the Commission

(18) In addition to the right to carers' leave provided for in this Directive, all workers should maintain their right to take time off from work on the grounds of force majeure for urgent and unexpected family reasons, currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, under the conditions established by the Member States.

Amendment

(18) In addition to the right to carers' leave provided for in this Directive, all workers should maintain their right to take time off from work, without loss of employment rights, on the grounds of force majeure for urgent and unexpected family reasons, currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, under the conditions established in accordance with national law.

Amendment 31

Proposal for a directive

Recital 19

Text proposed by the Commission

(19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the allowance should be at least equivalent to what the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave. Member States should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including healthcare.

Amendment

(19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to a payment or an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the payment or allowance should be at least equivalent to 78 % of the worker's gross wage in the case of parental leave and carers' leave. Member States should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including pension and healthcare.

Amendment 32

Proposal for a directive Recital 20

Text proposed by the Commission

(20) In accordance with Directive 2010/18/EU Member States are required to define the status of the employment contract or employment relationship for the period of parental leave. In accordance with the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, the employment relationship between the worker and his employer is therefore maintained during the period of leave and, as a result, the beneficiary of such leave, remains, during that period, a worker for the purposes of Union law. When defining the status of employment contract or employment relationship during the period of the leaves covered by this Directive, including as regards entitlements to social security, the Member States should therefore ensure that the employment relationship is maintained.

Amendment

(20) In accordance with Directive 2010/18/EU Member States are required to define the status of the employment contract or employment relationship for the period of parental leave. In accordance with the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, the employment relationship between the worker and his employer is therefore maintained during the period of leave and, as a result, the beneficiary of such leave, remains, during that period, a worker for the purposes of Union law. When defining the status of employment contract or employment relationship during the period of the leaves covered by this Directive, including as regards entitlements to social security, the Member States should therefore ensure that the employment relationship is maintained without prejudice to entitlements to social security including pension contribution, which the worker remains subject to throughout the period of leave. To that end, the Member States should ensure that the leave provided for in this Directive does not affect the worker's pension entitlements during the entire period.

(21) In order to encourage working parents and carers to remain in the work force, those workers should be able to adapt their working schedules to their personal needs and preferences. Working parents and carers should therefore be able to request flexible working arrangements, meaning the possibility for workers to adjust their working patterns, including through the use of remote working arrangements, flexible working schedules, or a reduction in working hours, for caring purposes. In order to address the needs of workers and employers, it should be possible for Member States to limit the duration of flexible working arrangements, including a reduction in working hours. While working part-time has been shown to be useful in allowing some women to remain in the labour market after having children, long periods of reduced working hours may lead to lower social security contributions translating into reduced or non-existing pension entitlements. The ultimate decision as to whether or not to accept a worker's request for flexible working arrangements should lie with the employer. Specific circumstances underlying the need for flexible working arrangements can change. Workers should therefore not only have the right to return

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The Commission's proposed directive is one of the first deliverables of the European Pillar for Social Rights. It is based on the 'New Start' initiative aimed to address the work-life balance challenges faced by working parents and carers. The initiative will help in the pursuit of the objectives set out in the Treaty of equality between men and women with regard to labour market opportunities and equal treatment at work and the promotion of high level of employment in the EU.

The legislative proposal thus aims to focus on targeting measures to address the under-representation of women in employment by improving the conditions of reconciling working and private duties, but also their unequal treatment and opportunities in the labour market. Furthermore, it encourages the strengthening of men's roles as carers in the family, which will also benefit children. It is well documented that the use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, has demonstrated that they have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment. It thereby promotes non-discrimination and fostering gender equality. The proposed Directive in its current form aims to cover all workers, men and women, who have an employment contract or employment relationship.

It seeks to introduce a number of new or higher minimum standards for parental, paternity and carers' leave, which are geared at helping to address the anomalies that exist in achieving a work life balance for both parents and carers. The Rapporteur believes that these measures are both timely and necessary in order to improve access to work-life balance arrangements and to better reflect the changing working patterns in our society.

The Rapporteur further believes that the availability of quality, accessible, and affordable childcare infrastructure has proven to be a crucial aspect to work-life balance policies in the Member States and that facilitates the rapid return of women to work and their increased participation in the labour market. He would therefore encourage the Member States to improve childcare facilities and would like to see this reflected in the text; he therefore inserts related recital in the Directive.

Within the same spirit of Article 153 on which this Directive is being proposed the Rapporteur would like to introduce in addition to small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) a specific emphasis on micro enterprises as the Rapporteur believes that due to their particular specificities and constraints, that are different from those of SMEs, they might find it more challenging to implement certain parts of this directive.

Throughout the text, the Rapporteur ensured that additional micro, small and medium sized enterprises (MSMEs) provisions are added to ensure that this Directive shall avoid imposing administrative, financial and legal constraints in a way which would hold back the creation and development of such undertakings, without taking away the rights of their workers to avail themselves of work-life balance arrangements. As an example, the Rapporteur qualified in one of his amendments, without any prejudice to whether such a request should be granted or not by the employer that we should take into account the difficulties that flexible working arrangements may cause to MSMEs.

In order to address the concern that certain administrative burdens might be severely detrimental to micro enterprises the Rapporteur has proposed that Member States should have the option to adopt measures to limit the burden on micro enterprises from the provisions of Article 12 (Protection from dismissal and burden of proof), in order not to risk imposing a disproportionate burden on such enterprises.

The Commission's main proposals introduce the following new elements to what is currently already in force:

- The Directive introduces a right to paternity leave of no less than ten working days around the birth of a child. This is a major new development, considering that presently there are no minimum European-level standards for paternity leave. The Rapporteur fully supports this new proposal as the opportunities and incentives for fathers to take leave range considerably across Member States. Where such leave exists the level of pay and days of leave vary considerably.

The Rapporteur amended the text to include the right to paternity leave also on the occasion of the adoption of a child. It is clear that the birth or adoption of a child is an important time for the father to be present and share the responsibilities with his partner. It is a time for bonding, which has been proven to be important for both the child and the father. The Rapporteur has proposed an amendment to clarify that the worker that is considered a father could also be an equivalent second parent as defined in national law.

With reference to the level of pay or allowance the Rapporteur maintained the Commission proposal for persons availing themselves of paternity leave to be paid at sick pay level in order to mirror existing EU legislation catering for leave at the time of the birth of a child.

- With regards to the Parental leave directive (2010/18/EU), which will be repealed once this proposed Directive enters into force, workers have an individual right to parental leave of at least 4 months, of which one month is non-transferable, on the grounds of birth or adoption of a child. This can be taken at least until the child reaches the age of 8 years. Currently there is no obligation of pay during parental leave and it is up to the Member States and social partners to decide on the detailed conditions of this leave.

The current proposal on the other hand strengthens the right to parental leave by making the 4 month period compensated at least at the level of sick pay and non-transferable from one parent to another. Parents will also have the right to request to total period of leave in a flexible way and the age of the child up to which parents can take leave will be increased from 8 to 12 years. The Rapporteur agrees with this proposal as the current Union legal framework provides limited incentives for men to assume an equal share of caring responsibilities. It is well documented that the use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, has demonstrated that they have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment.

On the other hand, whilst the Rapporteur agrees that parental leave should be paid he deviated from the Commission proposal and is proposing that the worker receives a payment or allowance of at least equivalent to 75% of the gross wage. The Rapporteur believes that setting a standard percentage of payment at EU level will address the anomalies between the different rates at which workers are paid at sick pay level in the different Member States and create a level playing field for all workers and will help in the take up of leave by more fathers, for whom the lack of economic return is a strong disincentive to taking parental leave.

The Rapporteur introduced a proposal to better manage the request of parental leave by establishing a clear notice period to be given by the worker requesting a period of leave to the employer with the exact timeframe for when the worker intends to exercise their right to parental leave. The Rapporteur believes that this would benefit both employers in their planning and workers by giving them the possibility of being able to take up this leave when it is needed most. This is especially even more relevant to MSMEs as they do not afford the luxury of an extensive number of employees or financial resources to recruit additional temporary workers.

- The Rapporteur welcomes the proposal to introduce a right to carer's leave for workers caring for seriously ill or dependant relatives. They will be able to take 5 days per year, compensated at least at the level of sick pay. The Rapporteur has proposed that carers leave are instead paid at least equivalent to 75% of the worker's gross wage.

- In parallel the new proposal also extends the right to request flexible working arrangements and to make use of parental leave to all working parents of children of at least up to the age of 12. The Rapporteur understands that this might generate certain difficulties, particularly for MSMEs, and has therefore proposed to amend the minimum age to 10.

MINORITY OPINION

Minority opinion by Joëlle Mélin and Dominique Martin on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on work-life balance for parents and carers and repealing Council Directive 2010/18/EU

(COM(2017)0253 – C8-0137/2017 – 2017/0085(COD))

The dependency of a child, parent or collateral relative on a worker occurs frequently and is exclusively a private matter. However difficult or painful this situation may be, it should in no way modify the ordinary conditions of working life and alter the terms of parental leave currently in force, as this would skew the work-life balance in favour of private life which would de facto become dominant.

Moreover, this is a sovereign prerogative, both in principle and in terms of the amounts of the benefits; for, contrary to what we have been led to believe, the EU does not provide any bonuses here. Ultimately, it is not up to employers to compensate each of their employees for whatever the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune may have thrown at them, as this could undermine the national social protection systems and whole swathes of our industry.

OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON WOMEN'S RIGHTS AND GENDER EQUALITY

for the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs

on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on work-life balance for parents and carers and repealing Council Directive 2010/18/EU (COM(2017)0253 – C8-0137/2017 – 2017/0085(COD))

Rapporteur for opinion: Agnieszka Kozłowska-Rajewicz

(*) Associated committees – Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

Work life-balance measures are a requirement not limited to women rights, but also necessary for safeguarding the rights of men and gender equality in general. They are also instrumental for the EU economy, including for combating the negative effects of population aging and labour shortages.

The situation of women in the labour market persists to be challenging – women's employment rate is 64% on average in the EU, while it is 76% for men. As evidence shows, the main reason for labour market inactivity for women is related to the lack of possibility to effectively reconcile professional work with family duties. As a consequence, the gender pension gap, which results from accumulated inequalities throughout women's life course and their periods of absence in the labour market stands at a stark 40% average for the EU¹. The progress in achieving gender equality in the labour market has been slow and work-life balance measures are needed to change this trend². Additionally, work-life balance policies are instrumental for an effective response to labour shortages and an increasingly aging population¹.

The Rapporteur wishes to focus on the objective of the Directive to increase women's employment and to well reflect its legal basis. Two crucial pillars of the proposal which the Rapporteur defines as fundamental for achieving these objectives are:

- 1) Non-transferability of parental leave is a condition for an equal share of leave between women and men and a tool for increasing women's presence in the labour market and men's engagement in family duties.
- 2) Sick pay level of compensation during leaves is compatible with the existing legal framework and the Maternity Leave Directive. Fathers take up leaves when a sufficiently high level of compensation is provided².

Paid paternity leave is the first precondition for fathers to engage in care responsibilities³. The Rapporteur decided, however, to introduce a level of flexibility for the take-up of paternity leave giving fathers a possibility to use this right within the first year after birth or adoption: more fathers will be likely to take the leave as some men might not be sufficiently confident in taking care of a child just after birth. Still, the Rapporteur decided to maintain the preference for the take-up of paternity leave at the occasion of birth or adoption, as evidence shows that father-child bonding happens most efficiently at that early stage⁴. As for the carers' leave, the Rapporteur views it as a welcome response to the problem of aging population since care responsibilities are not limited just to childcare.

The Rapporteur introduces several modifications with intention of making the proposal responsive to the demands of the EU economies:

Firstly, while work-life balance measures are long-term investments bringing economic prosperity and enhancing women's employment, particular attention has to be paid to ensuring that the short-term and long-term functioning of business, in micro, small and medium-sized companies, are safeguarded. Better clarity for companies which will allow for a more efficient planning and prevention of the loss of productivity is required. To this end, the Rapporteur emphasizes the need for clear notice periods as well as qualifying periods for the leaves and for flexible working arrangements.

While the Rapporteur recognizes the need for paying special attention to disadvantaged groups, she decided not to introduce an extended leave right for single working parents since the objectives of the Directive focus on increasing women's presence in the labour market. Extending leave periods for single parents may in practice prolong the absence from employment of single mothers, who are the majority of single parents, and therefore, undermine the objective of the Directive with detrimental effects to these women's financial independence. The Directive leaves it to the Member States to determine the nature and structure of support in cases of disadvantaged families which the Rapporteur fully supports. To conclude, the Rapporteur believes that the position of the European Parliament should be focused on defending the principal objectives of the Directive and on the legal basis which is founded on equality between women and men. The European Parliament should also be strategic and avoid the failure of an overambitious proposal by respecting the expressed reservations of Member States with a goal of rapid adoption in the Council.

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6 a) The European Pillar of Social Rights, which was proclaimed by Member States on 17 November 2017 aims to deliver new and more effective rights for citizens of the Union. The Pillar builds upon 20 key principles, including Principle 2 on Gender Equality, Principle 3 on Equal Opportunities, and Principle 9 on Work-life Balance. The latter states that “[p]arents and people with caring responsibilities have the right to suitable leave, flexible working arrangements and access to care services. Women and men shall have equal access to special leaves of absence in order to fulfil their caring responsibilities and be encouraged to use them in a balanced way”.

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(6b) Approximately 80% of informal, usually unpaid care across the Union is provided by families and friends, who are providing an indispensable part of the provision, organisation and sustainability of health and social care systems. Approximately two-thirds of carers in Europe are women. The economic value of unpaid informal care in the Union, as a percentage of the overall cost of formal long-term care provision, is estimated to range from 50 to 90%;

A major factor contributing to the underrepresentation of women in the labour market is the difficulty of balancing work and family obligations. When they have children, women tend to work less hours in paid employment and spend more time fulfilling unpaid care responsibilities. Having an ill or dependent relative has also been shown to have a negative impact on female employment, leading some women to drop out of the labour market entirely.

paid employment. Furthermore, Eurofound research shows that take-up rates among parents depend on many intertwined factors. Such factors include: information about the leave available; leave compensation and pay disparities; availability and flexibility of childcare facilities; prevailing family organisation models; and the extent to which workers fear isolation from the labour market when taking leave^{1a}.

Amendment 8

Proposal for a directive Recital 8 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8 a) The availability of quality, accessible, and affordable infrastructure for the care of children and other dependants has proven to be a crucial factor for work-life balance policies that facilitate the rapid return of mothers to, and an increasing participation of women on, the labour market. However, by 2018 the majority of Union Member States have still not yet achieved the so-called Barcelona objectives for childcare, set in 2002. The achievement of these objectives is crucial to allow women to fully participate in employment and prioritising the investment in community-based quality, accessible and affordable childcare in the Multiannual Financial Framework is pivotal for unlocking the situation.

Amendment 9

Proposal for a directive Recital 8 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(8b) A disproportionately high tax burden on the second earner in most Member States remains a significant disincentive to the participation of women in the labour market. The identification and removal of all obstacles resulting from gender-biased tax benefit systems is essential to promote women to fully participate in employment and to promote the equal share of reproductive work and care responsibilities.

Amendment

(13) In order to encourage a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paternity leave for fathers to be taken on the occasion of the birth of a child should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in national law.

(13) In order to encourage a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paid paternity leave for fathers or an equivalent second parent as defined in national law to be taken around the occasion of the birth or adoption of a child and within duration limits of the maternity leave should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in national law.

Amendment 11

(13 a) Member States should also assess whether the conditions and detailed arrangements of paternity leave should be adapted to the specific needs of fathers in special situations requiring them to be more present, in particular with regard to fathers having a disability and fathers with children with disabilities including mental health problems or serious medical conditions or illnesses, and single fathers as defined by the national law and practice in Member States.

Amendment 12

Proposal for a directive Recital 14

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other.

Amendment

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other. Member States should be able to specify that two months of parental leave should be taken during the first four years of the child's life. (19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the allowance should be at least equivalent to what the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave. Member States should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including healthcare.

(19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the allowance should be defined by the Member State and should be equivalent to the maternity leave pay as defined at the national level in case of paternity leave, while in the case of the parental leave and the carers' leave it should be at least equivalent to 80% of the worker's gross wage. With this, Member States would ensure that the payment or allowance is set at a level that encourages parents to better share the entitlements and should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including healthcare and pension schemes.

Amendment 18

Proposal for a directive

Recital 20

Text proposed by the Commission

(20) In accordance with Directive 2010/18/EU Member States are required to define the status of the employment contract or employment relationship for the period of parental leave. In accordance with the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, the employment relationship between the worker and his employer is therefore maintained during the period of leave and, as a result, the beneficiary of such leave, remains, during that period, a worker for the purposes of Union law. When defining the status of employment contract or employment relationship during the period of the leaves covered by this Directive, including as regards entitlements to social security, the Member States should therefore ensure that the employment relationship is maintained.

(20) In accordance with Directive 2010/18/EU Member States are required to define the status of the employment contract or employment relationship for the period of parental leave. In accordance with the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, the employment relationship between the worker and his employer is therefore maintained during the period of leave and, as a result, the beneficiary of such leave, remains, during that period, a worker for the purposes of Union law. When defining the status of employment contract or employment relationship during the period of the leaves covered by this Directive, the Member States should therefore ensure that the employment relationship is maintained without prejudice to entitlements to social security including to pension contribution to which the worker remains subject throughout the period of leave. In that perspective, Member States should ensure the leave provided for in this Directive does not affect the worker's pension entitlements during all this period.

Amendment 19

Proposal for a directive

Recital 21

(21) In order to encourage working parents and carers to remain in the work force, those workers should be able to adapt their working schedules to their personal needs and preferences. Working parents and carers should therefore be able to request flexible working arrangements, meaning the possibility for workers to adjust their working patterns, including through the use of remote working arrangements, flexible working schedules, or a reduction in working hours, for caring purposes. In order to address the needs of workers and employers, it should be possible for Member States to limit the duration of flexible working arrangements, including a reduction in working hours. While working part-time has been shown to be useful in allowing some women to remain in the labour market after having children, long periods of reduced working hours may lead to lower social security contributions translating into reduced or non-existing pension entitlements. The ultimate decision as to whether or not to accept a worker's request for flexible working arrangements should lie with the employer. Specific circumstances underlying the need for flexible working arrangements can change. Workers should therefore not only have the right to return to their original working patterns at the end of a given agreed period, but should also be able to request to do so at any time where a change in the underlying circumstances so requires.

Working parents and carers should therefore be able to request flexible working arrangements, meaning the possibility for workers to adjust their working patterns, including through the use of remote working arrangements where appropriate, flexible working schedules, or a reduction in working hours, for caring purposes. In order to address the needs of workers and employers, it should be possible for Member States to limit the duration of flexible working arrangements, including a reduction in working hours. While working part-time has been shown to be useful in allowing some women to remain in the labour market after having children, long periods of reduced working hours may lead to lower social security contributions translating into reduced or non-existing pension entitlements. While the ultimate decision as to whether or not to accept a worker's request for flexible working arrangements should lie with the employer, it should take into account the needs of employees as well as the constraints to the working arrangements and planning for the micro enterprises, and should justify a refusal. Specific circumstances underlying the need for flexible working arrangements can change. Workers should therefore not only have the right to return to their original working patterns at the end of a mutually agreed period, but should also be able to request to do so at any time where a change in the underlying circumstances so requires.

Amendment 20

Proposal for a directive

Recital 22

Text proposed by the Commission

(22) Leave arrangements are intended to support working parents and carers during a specific period of time, and are aimed at maintaining and promoting their continued attachment to the labour market. It is therefore appropriate to make express provision for the protection of the employment rights of workers taking leave covered by this Directive and in particular their right to return to the same or an equivalent post, and not to suffer any detriment in their terms and conditions as a result of their absence. Workers should retain their entitlement to relevant rights already acquired, or in the process of being acquired, until the end of such leave.

(22) Leave arrangements are intended to support working parents and carers during a specific period of time, and are aimed at maintaining and promoting their continued attachment to the labour market. It is therefore appropriate to make express provision for the protection of the employment rights of workers taking leave covered by this Directive and in particular their right to return to the same or an equivalent post, and not to suffer any detriment in their terms and conditions as a result of their absence. Workers should retain their entitlement to relevant rights already acquired, or in the process of being acquired, until the end of such leave.

Equally important is the goal of leave arrangements to ensure that working parents maintain quality of family life, by taking care of their children, carrying out their responsibilities, including their primary educational role especially during early childhood, in the best possible way and by spending quality time with their children. An ineffective reconciliation of family and professional life can also have a negative impact on the physical and mental health of children and parents.

and/or practice, and taking into account the powers delegated to social partners, Member States shall ensure that workers exercising the rights to leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 will receive a payment or an adequate allowance at least equivalent to what the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave.

and/or practice, and taking into account the powers delegated to social partners, Member States shall ensure that workers exercising the rights to leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 will receive a payment or an adequate allowance as follows:

(a) for paternity leave as referred to in Article 4(1), a payment or allowance equivalent to maternity leave pay as defined at the national level whilst ensuring the principle of equal pay for women and men;

(b) for parental leave as referred to in Article 5(1), a payment or allowance of at least equivalent to 80 % of the worker's gross wage;

(c) for carers' leave as referred to in Article 6, a payment or allowance of at least equivalent to 80 % of the worker's gross wage.

Amendment 49

Proposal for a directive Article 9 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that workers with children up to a given age, which shall be at least twelve, and carers, have the right to request flexible working arrangements for caring purposes. OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON LEGAL AFFAIRS

for the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs

on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on work-life balance for parents and carers and repealing Council Directive 2010/18/EU (COM(2017)0253 – C8-0137/2017 – 2017/0085(COD))

Rapporteur: Joëlle Bergeron

SHORT JUSTIFICATION

The Commission considers that the proposal for a directive is consistent with the need to take a broader approach to the issue of the work-life balance and reflects recent societal trends.

Its aim is to address the under-representation of women in the labour market and to support their career progression by making it easier for them to reconcile their professional and family responsibilities. With this aim in view, it lays down minimum criteria needed to establish proper equality between men and women as regards labour market opportunities and treatment at work. It promotes non-discrimination and gender equality by adapting and updating the EU legal framework in this area.

In the EU, most people working part time are women (32% of all women, as against 8% of men), and this is largely due to the difficulties they face in reconciling their professional and private lives. This in turn very often leads to very significant pay and pension gaps between men and women. The current legal framework in the EU and in the Member States offers men few incentives to take on an equal share of family duties. These shortcomings must be addressed as a matter of urgency. Your rapporteur very much endorses the specific objectives set in the proposal for a directive, which involve in particular improving access to schemes which make it easier to reconcile professional and private life and encouraging more men to make use of family leave and flexible working arrangements. On that latter point, the level of pay offered to people on parental leave is an important consideration in ensuring fairness in the way that men and women take such leave. The gender gap in this regard is considerable, however, as parental leave pay is currently ridiculously low. The Commission proposal to bring parental leave pay up to the same level as sick pay is a step forward. What we need to keep in mind at all times and use as the guiding principle is child protection. Your rapporteur has no doubt that it is in a child's best interests to be brought up and cared for by, and have the company of, both parents equally. She therefore takes the view that men and women should be put in a position to play an equal role in raising a family. This can be done by eliminating inequalities between women and men in paid and unpaid jobs, and by encouraging them to take an equal share of responsibility for work in the home and for caring for children and relatives who require assistance.

Due account needs to be taken of the requirements of and the constraints on employers, however – particularly in small companies made up of two or three people. Granting parental leave can put such companies in a very difficult position. For that reason, your rapporteur highlights the need to guarantee employers better protection, but also to prevent abuses of the system by workers absent for what they claim are urgent family reasons. With that aim in mind, the right to parental leave should be made contingent on the submission of supporting documents and completion of a minimum period of service of no more than nine months. Leave for carers should also be better regulated to protect employers against abuses of the system. At the same time, it is essential that workers wishing to care for a close relative be given the opportunity to establish a better work-life balance, so that they do not quit the job market once and for all.

Your rapporteur also stresses that the situation of parents of a child with a disability or a serious illness and instances of multiple births or adoptions have not been taken into account by the Commission. She takes the view that the option to double parental leave should be available in such cases.

The same should apply to single parents, who are constantly increasing in number and who cannot be ignored.

AMENDMENTS

The Committee on Legal Affairs calls on the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs, as the committee responsible, to take into account the following amendments:

Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive

Recital 2

Text proposed by the Commission

(2) Equality between men and women is a fundamental principle of the Union. According to Article 3 of the Treaty on European Union the promotion of equality between women and men is one of the Union's aims. Similarly, Article 23 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union requires equality between women and men to be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay.

Amendment

(2) Equality between men and women is a fundamental principle of the Union. According to Article 3 of the Treaty on European Union the promotion of equality between women and men is one of the Union's aims. Similarly, Article 23 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union requires equality between women and men to be ensured in all areas, including employment, work and pay. This Directive contributes to those objectives by eliminating disparities, strengthening gender equality, promoting a high level of employment and consolidating the Union's social dimension, as well as boosting upward convergence in the Member States with regard to of social benefits.

Amendment 2

Proposal for a directive Recital 3

Text proposed by the Commission

(3) Article 33 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union provides for the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, to reconcile family and professional life.

Amendment

(3) Article 33 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (the Charter) provides for legal, economic and social protection of the family, the right to protection from dismissal for a reason connected with maternity and the right to paid maternity leave and to parental leave following the birth or adoption of a child, to reconcile family and professional life.

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(4a) People with disabilities should have the right to income support that ensures living in dignity, services that enable them to participate in the labour market and in society, as well as a work environment adapted to their needs.

Amendment 4

Proposal for a directive Recital 4 b (new)

(4b) Equality of treatment and opportunities between women and men should be ensured and fostered in all areas, including participation in the labour market, terms and conditions of employment and career progression. Women and men have the right to equal pay for work of equal value.

Amendment 5

Proposal for a directive

Recital 5

Text proposed by the Commission

(5) Work-life balance policies should contribute to the achievement of gender equality by promoting the participation of women in the labour market, making it easier for men to share caring responsibilities on an equal basis with women, and closing gender gaps in earnings and pay. Such policies should take into account demographic changes including the effects of an ageing population.

Amendment

(5) Work-life balance policies should contribute to the achievement of gender equality by promoting the participation of women in the labour market and encouraging the participation and role of men in family life, in accordance with Article 24 of the Charter, which provides that every child is to have the right to maintain on a regular basis a personal relationship and direct contact with both parents unless that is contrary to the child's interests, in favour of the fair sharing of responsibilities for bringing up and caring for children, thereby helping to close the gender gaps in earnings, pay and pensions. Such policies should take into account demographic changes including the effects of an ageing population. In that context, promoting a better work-life balance could represent an important incentive for increasing the birth-rate.

Amendment 6

Proposal for a directive

Recital 6 a (new)

(6a) According to the data for October 2017 (Commission statistics), the male employment rate in the Union was 71,9 %, compared to the female employment rate of 61,4 %, despite the fact that women have a higher level of education.

Amendment 7

Proposal for a directive Recital 7

Text proposed by the Commission

(7) Work-life balance remains however a considerable challenge for many parents and workers with caring responsibilities, with a negative impact on female employment. A major factor contributing to the underrepresentation of women in the labour market is the difficulty of balancing work and family obligations. When they have children, women tend to work less hours in paid employment and spend more time fulfilling unpaid care responsibilities. Having an ill or dependent relative has also been shown to have a negative impact on female employment, leading some women to drop out of the labour market entirely.

Amendment

(7) The rise of the dual-earner household has led to work intensification and greater pressures on, and demands for, work-life balance. As a result, work-life balance remains a considerable challenge for many parents and workers with caring responsibilities, with a negative impact on female employment. A major factor contributing to the underrepresentation of women in the labour market is the difficulty of balancing work and family obligations. When they have children, elderly dependents or immediate relatives with incapacitating chronic diseases, women are obliged to work fewer hours in paid employment and spend more time fulfilling unpaid care responsibilities. This contributes substantially to the gender pay gap, which is as high as 28 % in certain Member States, and accumulates over the working life into a gender pension gap, which averages 40 % in the Union, and results in a higher risk of poverty and social exclusion for women. Having an ill or dependent relative has also been shown to have a negative impact on female employment, leading some women to drop out of the labour market in part or entirely.

(8) The current Union legal framework provides limited incentives for men to assume an equal share of caring responsibilities. Lack of paid paternity and parental leave in many Member States contributes to the low take-up of such leave by fathers. The imbalance in the design of work-life balance policies between women and men reinforces gender differences between work and care. Conversely, use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, such as leave or flexible working arrangements, has been shown to have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment.

(8) The current Union legal framework provides limited incentives for men to assume an equal share of caring responsibilities. There are no harmonised Union rules providing for paternity leave or leave to care for ill or dependent relatives, with the exception of absence for reasons of force majeure. Lack of paid paternity and parental leave in many Member States contributes to the low take-up of such leave by fathers. The imbalance or inadequacy in the design of work-life balance policies between women and men slows down growth, leads to a departure from the objectives of social inclusion, puts women at greater risk of poverty, especially in old age, and reinforces gender differences between work and care.

Conversely, use of work-life balance arrangements by fathers, such as leave, sufficient incentives to avail themselves of such leave or flexible working arrangements, has been shown to have a positive impact in reducing the relative amount of unpaid family work undertaken by women and leaving them more time for paid employment and their social, economic and professional emancipation.

Recital 12 b (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(12b) This Directive aims to improve and strengthen the provisions concerning admissibility and regulatory certainty for the granting of parental leave to those with children with disabilities or serious long-term illnesses, especially in order to avoid arbitrary treatment regarding the granting of leave for the relevant age groups going beyond current provisions, the introduction of vouchers or special contributions to meet the costs of child care services.

Amendment

(13) In order to encourage a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paternity leave for fathers to be taken on the occasion of the birth of a child should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in national law.

(13) In order to encourage a more equal sharing of caring responsibilities between women and men, the right to paternity leave for the second parent to be taken, if requested, on the occasion of the birth or adoption of a child should be introduced. In order to take account of differences among Member States, the right to paternity leave should be irrespective of marital or family status as defined in

Recital 14

Text proposed by the Commission

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other.

Amendment

(14) As the majority of fathers do not avail themselves of their right to parental leave or transfer a considerable proportion of their leave entitlement to mothers, in order to foster a close early relationship with the child and encourage the second parent to take parental leave, this Directive, while maintaining the right of each parent to at least four months of parental leave currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, extends from one to four months the period of parental leave which cannot be transferred from one parent to the other.

Amendment

(15) In order to provide greater possibility for parents to use parental leave as their children grow up, the right to parental leave should be granted until the child is at least thirteen years old. Member States should be able to specify the period of notice to be given by the worker to the employer when applying for parental leave. To balance the needs of workers with those of employers, Member States should also be able to decide whether they define if the employer may be allowed to postpone the granting of parental leave under certain circumstances. In such cases, the employer should provide justification in writing for calculating the period of service. To balance the needs of workers with those of employers, Member States should also be able to decide whether they define if the employer may be allowed to postpone the granting of parental leave under certain circumstances. In such cases, the employer should provide justification for the postponement. Given that flexibility makes it more likely that second parents, in particular fathers, will take up their entitlement to such leave, workers should be able to request to take parental leave on a full-time or part-time basis or in other flexible forms. It should be up to the employer whether or not to accept such a request for parental leave in other flexible forms than full-time. Member States should also assess if the conditions and detailed arrangements of parental leave should be adapted to the specific needs of parents in particularly disadvantaged situations.

(16) In order to facilitate the return to work following parental leave, workers and employers should make arrangements for any appropriate reintegration measures, to be decided between the parties concerned, taking into account national law, collective agreements and practice

(18) In addition to the right to carers' leave provided for in this Directive, all workers should maintain their right to take time off from work on the grounds of force majeure for urgent and unexpected family reasons, currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, under the conditions established by the Member States.

Amendment

(18) In addition to the right to carers' leave provided for in this Directive, all workers should maintain their right to take time off from work for urgent and unexpected family reasons, currently provided for by Directive 2010/18/EU, under the conditions established by the Member States.

Amendment 24

Proposal for a directive Recital 19

Text proposed by the Commission

(19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the allowance should be at least equivalent to what the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave. Member States should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including healthcare.

Amendment

(19) To increase the incentives for workers with children and caring responsibilities, men in particular, to take the periods of leave provided for in this Directive, they should have the right to an adequate allowance while on leave. The level of the allowance should be adequate and no less than the amount the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave. Member States should take into account the importance of the continuity of the entitlements to social security, including healthcare.

Amendment 25

Proposal for a directive Recital 21

Text proposed by the Commission

(21) In order to encourage working parents and carers to remain in the work force, those workers should be able to adapt their working schedules to their personal needs and preferences. Working parents and carers should therefore be able to request flexible working arrangements,

Amendment

(21) In order to encourage working parents and carers to remain in the work force, employers should give them the possibility to adapt their working schedules to their personal needs and preference. Without abusing that right, working parents and carers should be able to request meaning the possibility for workers to adjust their working patterns, including through the use of remote working arrangements, flexible working schedules, or a reduction in working hours, for caring purposes. In order to address the needs of workers and employers, it should be possible for Member States to limit the duration of flexible working arrangements, including a reduction in working hours. While working part-time has been shown to be useful in allowing some women to remain in the labour market after having children, long periods of reduced working hours may lead to lower social security contributions translating into reduced or non-existing pension entitlements. The ultimate decision as to whether or not to accept a worker's request for flexible working arrangements should lie with the employer. Specific circumstances underlying the need for flexible working arrangements can change. Workers should therefore not only have the right to return to their original working patterns at the end of a given agreed period, but should also be able to request to do so at any time where a change in the underlying circumstances so requires.

flexible working arrangements, meaning the possibility for workers to adjust their working patterns, including through the use of remote working arrangements, flexible working schedules, or a reduction in working hours, for caring purposes. In order to address the needs of workers and employers and ensure that they are properly balanced, it should be possible for Member States to limit the duration of part-time work, giving priority to other flexible working arrangements. While working part-time has indeed been shown to be useful in allowing some women to remain in the labour market after having children or other family responsibilities, long periods of reduced working hours may lead to lower social security contributions translating into reduced or non-existing pension entitlements. The ultimate decision as to whether or not to accept a worker's request for flexible working arrangements should lie with the employer. Specific circumstances underlying the need for flexible working arrangements can change. Workers should therefore not only have the right to return to their original working patterns at the end of a given agreed period, but should also be able to request to do so at any time where a change in the underlying circumstances so requires.

Amendment 26

Proposal for a directive

Recital 23

Text proposed by the Commission

(23) Workers exercising their rights to leave or to request flexible working arrangements should be protected against discrimination or any less favourable treatment on that ground.

Amendment

(23) Workers exercising their rights to leave or to request flexible working arrangements should be protected against discrimination, retaliation or any less favourable treatment on that ground.
Exercising one's right to leave or flexible working arrangements should not have adverse effects on the level of employment or other working conditions.

Amendment 27

Proposal for a directive Recital 24

Text proposed by the Commission

(24) Workers exercising their rights to take leave or to request flexible working arrangements provided for in this Directive should enjoy protection from dismissal and any preparations for a possible dismissal on the grounds that they applied for, or have taken such leave or have exercised the right to request such flexible working arrangements. Where workers consider that they have been dismissed on those grounds, they should be able to ask the employer to provide duly substantiated grounds for the dismissal.

Amendment

(24) Workers exercising their rights to take leave or to request flexible working arrangements provided for in this Directive should enjoy protection from dismissal, pressures and mobbing to the detriment of the worker and any preparations for a possible dismissal on the grounds that they applied for, or have taken such leave or have exercised the right to request such flexible working arrangements. Where workers consider that they have been dismissed on those grounds, they should be able to ask the employer to provide duly substantiated grounds for the dismissal.

Amendment 28

Proposal for a directive Article 1 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

This Directive lays down minimum requirements designed to achieve equality between men and women with regard to labour market opportunities and treatment at work through facilitating the reconciliation of work and family life for working parents and carers.

Amendment 43

Proposal for a directive Article 7 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that workers have the right to time off from work on grounds of force majeure for urgent family reasons in cases of illness or accident making the immediate presence of the worker indispensable. Member States may limit the right to time off from work on grounds of force majeure to a certain amount of time per year or per case, or both.

Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that workers have the right to time off from work on grounds of force majeure for urgent family reasons in cases of illness or accident making the immediate presence of the worker indispensable. Member States may make the right to time off from work on grounds of force majeure conditional on the submission of evidence they consider to be appropriate.

Amendment 44

Proposal for a directive
Article 8 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

In accordance with national circumstances, such as national law, collective agreements and/or practice, and taking into account the powers delegated to social partners, Member States shall ensure that workers exercising the rights to leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 will receive a payment or an adequate allowance at least equivalent to what the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave.

Amendment

In accordance with national circumstances, such as national law, collective agreements and/or practice, and taking into account the powers delegated to social partners, Member States shall ensure that workers exercising the rights to leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 will receive a payment, a tax credit or an adequate allowance that is no less than the amount the worker concerned would receive in case of sick leave.

Amendment 45

Proposal for a directive
Article 9 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that workers with children up to a given age, which shall be at least twelve, and carers, have the right to request flexible working arrangements for caring purposes. The duration of such flexible working arrangements may be subject to a reasonable limitation.

Amendment

1. Member States shall take the necessary measures to ensure that workers with children up to a given age, which shall be at least thirteen, and carers, have the right to request flexible working arrangements for caring purposes. The duration of such flexible working arrangements may be subject to a reasonable limitation.

Amendment 46

Proposal for a directive
Article 9 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

2. Employers shall consider and respond to requests for flexible working arrangements referred to in paragraph 1, taking into account the needs of both employers and workers. Employers shall justify any refusal of such a request.

Amendment

2. Employers shall consider and respond in writing to requests for flexible working arrangements referred to in paragraph 1, taking into account the needs of both employers and workers. Employers shall justify in writing any refusal of such a request.

Amendment 47

Proposal for a directive Article 9 – paragraph 3

Text proposed by the Commission

3. When flexible working arrangements referred to in paragraph 1 are limited in duration, the worker shall have the right to return to the original working pattern at the end of the agreed period. The worker shall also have the right to request to return to the original working pattern whenever a change of circumstances so justifies. Employers shall be obliged to consider and respond to such requests, taking into account the needs of both employers and workers.

Amendment

3. When flexible working arrangements referred to in paragraph 1 are limited in duration, the worker shall have the right to return to the original working pattern at the end of the agreed period. Provision shall also be made for a transitional protection period following the worker's return to work in order to allow the worker an easier and more effective reintegration into professional life, bearing in mind that, during that protection period, the use of new technologies could help workers to move more quickly towards resuming work in a lasting, more agile manner, while updating their skills. The worker shall have the right to request to return to the original working pattern at the same level of employment. Employers shall justify in writing any refusal of such a request.

Amendment 48

Proposal for a directive Article 11 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall take the necessary measures to prohibit less favourable treatment of workers on the ground that they have applied for, or have taken, leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6, or on the ground that they have exercised their right to flexible working arrangements referred to in Article 9.

Amendment

Member States shall take the necessary measures to prohibit discrimination and less favourable treatment of workers on the ground that they have applied for, or have taken, leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6, or on the ground that they have exercised their right to flexible working arrangements referred to in Article 9.

Amendment 49

Proposal for a directive Article 12 – paragraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission

2. Workers who consider that they have been dismissed on the grounds that they have applied for, or have taken, leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 or of exercising the right to request flexible working arrangements referred to in Article 9 may request the employer to provide duly substantiated grounds for the dismissal. The employer shall provide those grounds in writing.

Amendment

2. Workers who consider that they have been dismissed on the grounds that they have applied for, or have taken, leave referred to in Article 4, 5 or 6 or of exercising the right to request flexible working arrangements referred to in Article 9 shall be entitled to request the employer to provide duly substantiated grounds for the dismissal. The employer shall be required to provide in due time those grounds in writing.

Amendment 50

Proposal for a directive Article 13 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall lay down rules on penalties applicable to breaches of national provisions adopted pursuant to this Directive or the relevant provisions already in force concerning the rights which are within the scope of this Directive. Member States shall take all measures necessary to ensure that those penalties are applied. Penalties shall be effective, proportionate and dissuasive. They may take the form of a fine. They may also comprise payment of compensation.

Amendment

Member States shall lay down rules on penalties applicable to breaches of national provisions adopted pursuant to this Directive or the relevant provisions already in force concerning the rights which are within the scope of this Directive. Member States shall take all measures necessary to ensure that effective, proportionate and dissuasive penalties are applied.

Amendment 51

Proposal for a directive Article 14 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall introduce measures

Amendment

Member States shall introduce measures necessary to protect workers, including workers who are employees' representatives, from any adverse treatment by the employer or adverse consequences resulting from a complaint lodged within the undertaking or any legal proceedings initiated with the aim of enforcing compliance with the rights provided for in this Directive.

necessary to protect workers from any adverse treatment by the employer or adverse consequences resulting from a complaint lodged within the undertaking or any legal proceedings initiated with the aim of enforcing compliance with the rights provided for in this Directive.

Amendment 52

Proposal for a directive Article 15 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States shall ensure that the body or bodies designated, pursuant to Article 20 of Directive 2006/54/EC, for the promotion, analysis, monitoring and support of equal treatment of parents and carers without discrimination on grounds of sex are also competent for issues falling within the scope of this Directive.

Amendment

Without prejudice to the powers of the labour inspection services or other bodies, including social services, responsible for monitoring workers' rights, Member States shall ensure that the body or bodies designated, pursuant to Article 20 of Directive 2006/54/EC, for the promotion, analysis, monitoring and support of equal treatment of parents and carers without discrimination on grounds of sex are also competent for issues falling within the scope of this Directive.

Amendment 53

Proposal for a directive Article 16 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

Member States may introduce or maintain provisions that are more favourable to workers than those laid down in this Directive. They shall however ensure that at least four months of parental leave remain non-transferable in accordance with Article 5(2).

Amendment

Member States may introduce or maintain provisions that are more favourable to workers than those laid down in this Directive, but shall not lower the standards laid down in their national legislation. They shall however ensure that at least four months of parental leave remain non-transferable in accordance with Article 5(2) and that the leave protection is mandatory for the parents of children with a disability and serious illnesses, as certified in accordance with the Member State's health authorities.

Amendment 54

Proposal for a directive Article 18 – paragraph 1

Text proposed by the Commission

1. At the latest, by five years after the entry into force of this Directive, Member States shall communicate to the Commission all relevant information concerning the application of this Directive necessary for the Commission to draw up a report to the European Parliament and the Council on the application of this Directive.

Amendment

1. By ... [three years after the entry into force of this Directive], Member States shall communicate to the Commission all relevant information concerning the application of this Directive and an in-depth evaluation of the effects of the Directive on female employment statistics, accompanied, if appropriate, by a legislative proposal.
